the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are illiterate has increased from 400 million to 600 million.

There are a number of reasons for this. One is that the population of the world is growing. Another is that the number of people who are illiterate in the developed world is increasing. This is because of the aging population and the fact that many people in the developed world are not reading or writing. In the developing world, the number of illiterate people is increasing because of the high birth rate and the fact that many children do not go to school.

There are a number of ways to reduce the number of illiterate people in the world. One way is to improve the quality of education. Another way is to provide more opportunities for people to learn to read and write. This can be done through community-based programs and through the use of technology.

It is important to reduce the number of illiterate people in the world because illiteracy is a major barrier to economic development and social progress. People who are illiterate are often unable to find work, to access health care, and to participate in their communities.

There are a number of organizations that are working to reduce the number of illiterate people in the world. These organizations include the United Nations, the World Bank, and a number of non-governmental organizations.

It is important to continue to work to reduce the number of illiterate people in the world. This will help to improve the lives of people around the world and will help to create a more just and equitable world.
